I hope you all had a nice week. Today we kicked off Dutch Dialogues: Virginia Life at Sea Level at the Slover Library. It was a full house with residents, city of Norfolk and Hampton staff, Dutch and American planning, economic, engineering experts. Teams are working through the weekend to develop solutions to water management and design innovative land use concepts for the Tidewater Drive District in Norfolk and Newmarket Creek in Hampton. The teams will provide preliminary reports on their findings Tuesday morning. Very exciting!

Manson Street: Norfolk Police conduct daily walking patrols along Manson Street. Officers also routinely inspect vacant properties. Officers are working with code inspectors to address vacant properties on the street. Since May -

- 2 cars on lawn (towed)
 - 1 traffic summons
 - 1 Abandoned auto
 - 4 Felony drug arrests (selling drugs)
- 10 contacts with citizens
4 Misdemeanor summons

Norfolk Community Services Board License: The Virginia Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Sciences awarded the Norfolk Community Services Board a triennial full-board license which is the highest and longest license granted. The decision was made after weeks of evaluation in which NCSB staff were found to be well-trained, proficient, friendly and helpful.

Crisis Intervention Team graduation: 18 police officers graduated from Crisis Intervention Team (CIT) training today. The total number of police graduates now stands at 201, meeting Chief Goldsmith's training goal. That's nearly half of the 413 patrol officers who have received CIT training. The Chief plans to train an additional 100 officers by July 1, 2016.

Have a good weekend.
